District of Columbia Society Sons of the American Revolution

COMPATRIOTS:

The March meeting of the Society will be held at Rauscher's, corner Connecticut Avenue and L Streets, Wednesday, March 21, 1900, at 8 p. m.

At the Meeting of the National Society, May 1, '99, medals were authorized to be struck from metal from a Spanish ship, or gun, for distribution to members of the order who served in the war with Spain. Medals for Members of the District of Columbia Society will be distributed as far as can be at this meeting.

Address by

HON. HENRY CABOT LODGE

In honor of the service, the speaker and the occasion, each compatriot is earnestly requested to be present.

A lunch will be served.

Vocal Music by Mr. Chas. E. Myers.

The following is a list of the officers and committees for the ensuing year, also a list of the delegates and alternates to the meeting of the National Society.

Compatriots named on the various committees will take notice and accept this as formal notice of such appointment.

District of Columbia Society

WASHINGTON, D. C., April 20, 1900.

COMPATRIOTS:

The District of Columbia Society, S. A. R. will celebrate its Decennial Monday, April 23, at 8 P. M., at Rauscher's.

Addresses by Compatriots General Henry V. Boynton and Wallace Donald McLean, representing the Senior and Junior Members, and an historical paper will be presented by Compatriot Professor John W. Chickering, the Historian of the Society.

In honor of the event and as a compliment to those who have so kindly consented to entertain the Society, a full attendance is invited.

It is apparent from the letters received since the presentation of medals at the last meeting that there are members of the Society who served in the War with Spain who are not represented in the present list either through failure to receive former circulars or because of service subsequent thereto or from not having been a member of the Society at the date of issue in 1898.

It is desired that the National Society have a full and complete list of the District of Columbia Society who served in the war with Spain and to that end it is asked that Compatriots who served as soldiers or sailors, volunteers or regulars during war with Spain, and who have not already forwarded the information, send without delay to the Corresponding Secretary a statement showing name, rank and service, and date of commencement of same.

THOMAS M. VINCENT,
President.

WILLIAM H. PEARCE,
Corresponding Secretary,

(Boston Evening Transcript, Saturday, June 8, 1895.)

THE National Society of Children of the American Revolution, which was incorporated in April, has started upon its work with the finest possible prospect of success. For the benefit of those who do not thoroughly understand the movement, its inception, its methods, and aims, the story can now be told in order that all who are interested in the welfare and development of children and young people may get an idea of the broad and beneficent basis on which the work is organized.

At the Continental Congress of the Daughters of the American Revolution, held in Washington, February 18 to 22, Mrs. Daniel Lothrop, regent of the Old Concord (Mass.) Chapter, D. A. R., in her response to Mrs. Adlai E. Stevenson's address of welcome on the opening day of the congress, originated the idea and made the proposition that such a society should be formed. The movement met with the heartiest approval on all sides, and by the unanimous vote of the congress Mrs. Lothrop was put in charge of the future organization. All who know the aims and life work of the late Daniel Lothrop, the eminent publisher, who did more than any other American to create a new era in juvenile literature, remember how he used his life to further the interest of young people, particularly in those directions which could assist them to patriotism and good citizenship; a purpose that was so strongly defined in his career as to be one of its chief controlling aims.

One of the reasons for starting the work is that it will tend to popularize the work of the public schools toward patriotism and good government; for those children who are not eligible for membership are to be gathered by the local societies into all its public meetings, into its plans, its work, its pleasures, so that

THE NATIONAL SOCIETY CHILDREN OF THE AMERICAN REVOLUTION.

The organizing of a patriotic Society, composed of children of lineal descent from those who helped forward the War of the Revolution, was a happy inspiration. As soon as it was suggested by its originator—Mrs. Daniel Lothrop of Concord, Mass.—its practicability was immediately recognized. The organization grew out of a recommendation made by Mrs. Lothrop, February 22d of this year, to the National Congress of the DAUGHTERS OF THE AMERICAN REVOLUTION at Washington.

The subject was received with the utmost favor, and at once adopted as a society enterprise, its founder being placed at its head, with full authority to perfect the organization, secure helpers and introduce it into the various States.

The local Chapters of the "DAUGHTERS OF THE AMERICAN REVOLUTION" are now in rapid process of formation, and Mrs. Lothrop will not long be delayed in witnessing the most gratifying consummation of her idea.

HOW THE PLAN ORIGINATED.

The reader cannot help but be greatly interested in the inception of this important enterprise. Fortunately, the sources of information are abundant and near at hand. The "Washington Times" of April 6, 1895, says:

"In company with her late husband, Daniel Lothrop, the well-known publisher, Mrs. Lothrop has spent a great part of her life in the work of the education and advancement of the young, and on the death of her husband she has taken upon herself all such work as can best further the interests of young people, particularly anything that can assist them to good citizenship, a purpose which was so strongly defined in the eminent publisher's life as to be one of his chief controlling aims."

Again, the "Boston Transcript" of June 8, 1895, says:

"All who know the aims and life work of the late Daniel Lothrop, the eminent publisher, who did more than any other American to create a new era in juvenile literature, remember how he used his life to further the interests of young people, particularly in those directions which would assist them in patriotic and good citizenship; a purpose that was so strongly defined in his career as to be one of his chief controlling aims."

Still further, Harriette Knight Smith in an article in "The Interior," Chicago, April 18, 1895, writes:

"Associated as she (Mrs. Lothrop) has been with her husband's work, and sharing with him his enthusiasm for all that made for the training of good American citizens, it is still a matter of conscience with her to carry forward the interests for which Mr. Lothrop gave his life."

In a note written me, Mrs. Lothrop says:

"I was not certain, whether or no, the time was ripe for the idea" (the response by Mrs. Lothrop to Mrs. Adlai Stevenson's address of welcome at the Continental Congress, DAUGHTERS OF THE AMERICAN REVOLUTION, 1895), "but the Lord gave me the opportunity of presenting it, and I delivered my message and trusted Him to take care of the idea. By the goodness of God, she adds, two days later the motion 'it directly appealed to the mothers and sisters of the little ones, and two days later the motion was presented and unanimously carried: That the Society of the CHILDREN OF THE AMERICAN REVOLUTION, as proposed by Mrs. Lothrop, be organized, and the entire management of the organization be vested in her."

"You will feel," she continued, "that I have undertaken a large work, but I am not dismayed since I seem to hear God say, 'I will hold up your hands and enable you to extend your husband's life-work for his native land.'"

"Is it not a glorious work?"
"I am happy in the hope of what I may be permitted to do for the youth of America, through this new organization."

A SUBJECT OF THOUGHT AND PRAYER.

It had long been, through these natural causes, mentioned above, a subject of thought and prayer with Mrs. Lothrop; and though the carrying out of the work

THE NATIONAL SOCIETY OF THE CHILDREN OF THE AMERICAN REVOLUTION.

ADDRESS BY MRS. DANIEL LOTHROP, PRESIDENT AND FOUNDER OF THE C. A. R.,
DELIVERED AT THE CONGRESS, D. A. R., AT ATLANTA, GA., OCTOBER 15, 1895.

Realizing the vastness of any subject that deals with the development of youth, and the slender thread of time allotted to it here, I yet approach it with gladness and a fervent desire to do all possible justice in its presentment before you who are equally interested in it with myself.

The history of our country's growth holds up to view several object lessons whose main teaching is the tremendous resources it possesses. Of the matchless wealth of her vast domain, teeming with inexhaustible vitality, every inch of the continent's length from shore to shore contributes its share to the result, this latest object lesson, the Exposition in your fair city, Atlanta.

Atlanta, beautiful city in a goodly land, and watched over by your hills, golden possibilities are yours, that looking down through the coming years, I can see gleaming now with promise. A fairer city than this shall arise and greet the eye; its walls shall girdle a vast metropolis, and beneficent prosperity shall make glad all the land. We are glad for its coming. Atlanta, you who have striven to do your part in preparing the way and have labored so valiantly, are worthy of it all. The precious fruits of the land are here, the waving grain, and all manner of goodly store; the hidden recesses of the earth have yielded their treasures, and man's ingenuity and skill are eloquent. All that makes a great nation is here represented in its processes, an object lesson indeed, speaking of greater, grander fulfillment in the twentieth century.

The fathers, with prophetic eye, saw in a measure, and they builded well, and better than they knew. Because they periled all that men hold dear, and suffered unto death, looking for no reward beyond what can come from obedience to God, behold a land is theirs in the daydawn of whose consummate glory and strength and greatness, we, their children's children, are standing.

The watchfire of their devoted service to God and country, kindled on old Plymouth Hill, never to go out, but to leap with arms of flame, carrying the torch of liberty to other mountain tops, is still burning, and the grandest work that we, O women, who look and long for noble endeavor, can do is to wait upon that fire, and count it a most precious thing to keep it ever pure and bright.

We call it patriotism, this beacon fire that flames aloft, and finds responsive gleam in the heart of man, making him willing to die for his country, and to bless God that he has a life to give to her.

On land or swelling sea,
I could live or die for thee,
Emblem of my liberty!

We have all things spread before us here in this Exposition as symbols of the greatness of our country to study and to admire. I bring before it her glory and her strength—the children and the youth of America!

BUNKER-HILL MONUMENT ASSOCIATION.

At the Annual Meeting of the Members of the Association, on the 17th of June, 1830, it was made the duty of the Directors, to petition the General Court of the Commonwealth, for a grant to the Association to complete the Monument, to be made from the funds receivable by the Commonwealth, under the late appropriation by Congress, for the payment of the services of the Militia of Massachusetts, during the late war. It was, by the same order, made the duty of the Directors, to take such other measures, as may be deemed most expedient, for the prosecution of the work; Provided, that the land be not sold, unless it shall be found absolutely necessary.

At a meeting of the Directors, on the 4th of August, it was resolved that a committee be chosen to report to the Directors the measures proper to be adopted, in discharge of the duty imposed on the Directors by the above mentioned order of the Association.
